MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear members,

I want to kick off the Spring season by sharing some notes from the last executive council meeting with you.

We were talking about the many new members we have this year, and how we can welcome them better. We were reminiscing about our time joining the club, and how intimidating it was initially, how long it took some of us to start participating in the competitions, to get to know others, learn the rules and ropes, etc.

It is very important to us in the council, and I know for many of you members, that IPS has a strong sense of community, identity, and unity. We want to make sure that new members feel welcomed, get onboarded and feel part of the club as soon as possible. We are thinking about implementing a "buddy system" between newcomers and longer-standing members, as well as improving our onboarding package for new members. We have already started some new practices, and as we think more about this we would like to hear from you, especially the new members, about your experience joining IPS. Please give us your feedback and suggestions!

A reminder that the deadline for submitting images to the IMF Annual Report is coming up on April 6. For more details, see the February issue of the Shutter Release.

A big congratulations to our very own Diane Kerswell for making it into the Exposed DC Annual Show! Her image Wilson Memorial Bridge was selected for the exhibition and can be seen at the Capital Fringe HQ. Congrats, Diane!

Last but not least, please join me in welcoming several new volunteers, who are also joining the executive council: Prapti Sherchan who is our new Webmaster, taking over from Alex Culiuc, Diane Kerswell who is the new Scorekeeper after Jevgenijs Bujanovs, and Xiaoxiao Peng as Program Director, replacing

Keith Miao, who has just left the IMF to pursue his dreams. Our hospitality Director Shannon Turkewitz is also joining the council. Please join me in welcoming Prapti, Diane, Xiaoxiao and Shannon to the executive council, and a huge thank you to Alex, Jevgenijs, and Keith for all your dedication and hard work for IPS!

Happy shooting,

Ceyda

FEBRUARY SPEAKER: KAREN KEATING

Karen Keating is an integral member of the Washington, D.C. photography community, wearing three distinct hats over the past twenty years teacher, administrator, and fine art photographer.

After receiving an M.F.A. in photography in 1986, Karen became director of the creative education program for photography at Glen Echo Park. In this capacity she teaches beginning, intermediate and advanced adult photography courses, a summer Young Peoples Photography course, designs curriculum, and manages instructors and staff.

Teaching has always been a passion of Karen's and for the past twelve years she has taught in the photography studio at The Field School. In this small independent high school located in northwest Washington, D.C. Karen recognizes and fosters the accessible creativity of the young students finding the teaching both challenging and rewarding.

Karen's love of photography stems from the documentary/street photography genre. Using available light, black and white medium format film and two cameras - the Hasselblad and the plastic "toy" Holga - Karen observes the everyday rituals and routines of people in foreign countries. These "street portraits" are the foundation of her portfolios from Bulgaria, Africa, Honduras, and, most recently, Cuba.

Beginning in February 2000 Cuba has become her current portfolio with each trip peeling away another layer of visual skin. In addition to the Cuban Millennium Portfolio Karen continues photographing the nation's Capital using infrared film to capture a touch of the surreal in the monuments of D.C.

She recently self-published her first photography book: Cubans: Watching and Waiting. www.karenkeating.com

MARCH 2015

IPS MEMBER PROFILE: FRED COCHARD

I am from France, but have now spent over half of my life in the United States (and 33 years in the Washington area).

I first joined IPS in 1992, but became an active member in 1996 and served for many years as vice-president of the club, editor of Shutter Release (in printed form only at that time) and then contributing writer for the newsletter. After all these years, and now retired from the World Bank for a little over a year, I have pulled back somewhat from regular club activities.

From the day I got my first Kodak Instamatic camera, photography has been my main hobby and a lifelong passion. Even before graduating from high

Nature is by far my favorite subject, but the same angles I take in shooting landscapes and other nature scenes also work for architecture and other fields. I like to dig deeper and closer than the general view, and focus on the play of light and shadows, forms and textures. More often than not, when I am in a setting that inspires me, after the initial moments of discovery I find myself "in a zone" and, when successful, discover things under the surface and beyond the obvious.

For a long time after I took up photography, I was almost addicted to short depth of field and most often shot wide open as a result: I just liked to have my main subject show up sharp school in France, I had decided I wanted to be a journalist (my first profession, before I switched to translation at the World Bank) and briefly gave some thought to photojournalism. Those were the glory days of magazines such as Life and Paris-Match, or photo agencies like Magnum, and I was deeply inspired by the work of their legendary photographers.

At the same time, I was quickly learning the craft on my own, thanks in large part to the darkroom my older brother had set up in our family apartment. But in the end, I decided to be a bit more realistic in my career aspirations and became a news writer and editor for the Associated Press.

against a fuzzy background. Over the years, though, and most especially through many of the highly instructive presentations given by guest photographers at our IPS meetings, I came to learn the importance of stopping down for greater sharpness. Today, the depth-of-field preview button on my Nikon D300 is probably the tool I use the most, pressing it in a rapid-fire way as I change openings and shutter speeds to get the optimal definition and sharp-fuzzy balance.

IPS MEMBER PROFILE: FRED COCHARD

Another thing I've also learned over the years is the importance of getting a sense of the place I shoot in and of the play of light at a given time. For instance, one place in the United States I had the good fortune to get to know back in the 1990s was the high valleys of Southwestern Montana.

Over many summers vacationing there with my wife's family, I developed a deeper, more intimate feel for the light quality specific to Big Sky country. My picture "White, Gold & Green" illustrates this: basically, it's just about grass, the prairie grass typical of Montana; but more deeply, it is also a play on late afternoon light and its magical qualities — I took this shot on my knees, to capture the filtered streaks of light from a low hanging sun.

Locally, one favorite place of mine in the past has been the Teddy Roosevelt Island memorial — at least when there was water in its basin, which hasn't been the case for a long time. My picture "Roosevelt Memorial Bridge" was the happy result of being in the right place at the right time: a crisp January afternoon with fairly low light filtering through surrounding trees to create magical reflections in the water under one of the basin's bridge spans.

There are so many photographers I could name as having inspired me right from the beginning, but I can try to list here a selective few, limiting myself to one name per field of work or area. Starting with photojournalism (my first passion): color, Larry Burrows; black and white, Robert Capa. Aerial photography (a close second): Georg Gerster. Photo-reportage style: color, Ernst Haas (his book In America was so influential on me in every possible way); black and white, Henri Cartier-Bresson/André Kertész (a tie I can't break). Nature: color, Eliot Porter; black and white, Ansel Adams (who else?). Washington area greats (a three-way tie): Tony Sweet, Frank Van Riper (two frequent IPS guests in the past) and Craig Sterling.
